MUCH MYSTERY ON ALL SIDES.

THOSE WHO KNOW WON'T TALK AND THOSE WHO DON'T KNOW WISH THEY DID-SOME-

THING WILL COME OUT TO-DAY. The Flack case will be reopened to-day at 11 o'clock a. m., when the agents of the Sheriff in getting a divorce from Mrs. Mary E. Flack will be required in the Court of Common Pleas to show cause why the judgment should not be set aride. Treadwell Cleveland, of the firm of Evarts, Choate & Beaman, obtained the order on behalf of Mrs. Flack from Judge Bookstaver early yesterday afternoon. It was granted on an effidevit made by Mrs. Flack and presented to Judge Bookstaver in private, in the Judge's own room. Its exact nature could not be learned, as Mr. Cleveland refused to make it public, and all the other lawyers interested in the case said either that they had not seen it or did not deem it polvisable to disclose the contents as yet. It is generally understood, however, that the grounds exleged by Mrs. Flack for questioning the finality of the judgment which is entered in her favor against the Sheriff are that fraud has been practien by several people in collusion. Who these people are is also a subject of general understand ing.

The privacy of the proceedings disappointed the large crowd that congregated in Judge Bookstaver's court-room before he took his seat on the bench, and waited patiently all through the forenoon in the expectation of something being done in the cause of Flack vs. Flack. Ex-Judge William Fullerton, Sheriff Flack's counsel, was one of the expectant waiters. He said that he had not received notice of any motion from "the opposition," nor had any notice been served on his client, but that he was there simply to watch what went en, as he had seen in the newspapers that "developments" were looked for.

William Flack, the sheriff's son, was also present, and so was J. Bingham, the husband of Mrs. Flack's niece. Some of young Mr. Flack's neighbors in the court-room assert that they heard him refer to his father's affair, in talking of it with a companion, as a blanked " farce." However that Xavier as professor of chemistry. may be, the Flack faction had reason to feel anything but farcical, because they were left out in the cold. Mr. Cleveland waited until the Judge had got through a vast amount of miscellaneous business, and then retired to the Judge's own room, where Judge Bookstaver joined him and remained closeted for a few minutes, with the results already mentioned and thus meagrely indicated in outline to the reporters by Mr. Cleveland and Judge Bookstaver himself. Ex-Judge Fullerton gained his first knowledge of what had happened from a reporter.

No one was more disgusted than Mr. Fullerton with the quiet and unobtrusive manner in which Mr. Cleveland scored the first point for Mrs. Flack. The ex-Judge hurried to the office of the

Mr. Cleveland scored the first point for Mrs. Flack. The ex-Judge hurried to the office of the Sheriff, who had come in from the Wawayanda Club in the morning, and had grimly and morosely "held the fort" against reporters, refusing to see them on any consideration. One of the newspapers sent a femple member of its staff to interview Mr. Flack, but he refused to see her with, it is said, even greater manifestations of agitation and alarm than were evoked from him by the persistent visits of the male reporters.

Mr. Fullerton held a short consultation with Sheriff Flack. Then he drove in a cab to his own office in Wallst. He there said to The Tribune reporter that he had not seen the rule and accompanying affidavit, and did not know that it had been served. Then he drove to Messes, Evarts, Choate & Beaman's office, at No. 52 Wall-st., and called on Mr. Cleveland. His visit lasted only a few minutes, and when he returned to his cab he gruffly told the reporter that he had "got no satisfaction from Mr. Cleveland." and that he was "on the outside." He will appear in court to-dry, and probably ask leave to interplead. From Wall-st. ex-Judge Fullerton returned to the County Court House, where he remained from 4 until 4 :30 p. m., when he drove uptown with the Sheriff.

It was impossible to get the opinions of the men most deeply interested on the latest turn affairs have taken in the Flack case. Benjamin Wright, the lawyer, closed his office and went out of town early. Ex-Judge Hoopee' C. Van Vorst was politely reticent. Civil Justice Ambrose Monell was also reticent, though not quite so politely. He promised, however, to make a self-vindicatory statement "at the proper time and Referre Joseph Meeks would not telk Clerk Nathaniel Jarvis only declared that he "courted the fullest investigation." No one now doubts that all concerned will get all the "investigation" they want, and that in to-day's proceedings the true history of the Flack divorce suit will begin to reach the public.

The general sentiment was against repealing the rule.

AFFAIRS IN BROOKLYN.

BLACKBIRD OR BLACK HAWK!

There is more or less feeling among the members of the United Colored Societies of Kings, Queens and Suffolk Countles over the fact that when an excursion was taken on Thursday of last week the boat sent to Jewell's Wharf for the excursionists was named the Blackbird. A protest was made, but the information was given that the only other boat available was the Black Hawk. Under protest the party embarked, with the exception of six women. The rest declared that they had a jolly time, and that a "blackbird" was as good as a "whitebird" at any time. The manager of the Starin boats said that no insult to the colored people was intended by sending the beat of the colored people was intended by sending the beat of the name Blackbird, and nothing had been thought of the affair until the protest was made, when it was too late to make a change. Most of the colored people of Brook-lyn are inclined to look at the matter as a joke.

NO QUORUM OF BRIDGE TRUSTEES.

Contrary to expectation, the Bridge Trustees failed to have a quorum for their August meeting yesterday, as none of the New-York trustees appeared at the new office. Four of the Brooklyn trustees were on hand. Treasurer Swan and Superintendent of on hand. Tolls Van Keuren will have another month to serve, as no successor could be selected to Mr. Hammersley, who has declined the office of treasurer and auditor with Mr. Van Kouren's duties added. The report for July showed that 2,784,300 perso used the Bridge, and the receipts were $141,226 88, including a balance on hand July 1 of $63,163 61. The expenditures were $77.880 35, leaving $63,346 53 in the treasury on August 1. The pay-roll for the north was over $40,000.

THE ROAD MUST NOT USE STEAM.

In the Supreme Court yesterday Judge Cullen gava decision enjoining the use of steam-cars by the Brooklyn City Raffroad Company in Thirty-ninth-st., under a lease from the South Brooklyn Street Rallroad Company, which was formed to operate cars by cable or electricity and secured permission recently from the city authorities, under the Act of 1873, to substitute steam. Judge Cullen helds that this Act was repealed by the Act of 1884 relative to the right to operate railroads in streets.

Judge Callen, in the Supreme Court, yesterday denied an injunction to L. C. Waterman & Co., to enjoin another lirm of Waterman & Co., from using the name "Ideal Fountain Pen."

CHARGING PIRACY AGAINST A BOOK FIRM. Two suits were begun yesterday in the United States Circuit Court under the copyright laws against the Henry G. Allen Company, a corporation which has been issuing a reprint of the ninth edition of the Enevelopaedia Britannica at a price lower than that of the authorized edition. The first suit is begun by the members of the firm of Adam & Charles Black, of Edinburgh, and Francis A. Walker, of Boston. The Blacks say they published the encyclopaedia at great living at No. 181 Waverly Place, and the boat was cost and that it consists of separate articles or books, Among the "books" is one entitled "United States, Part III-Political Geography and Statistics," which was written by Mr. Walker and copyrighted by him in this country. The complainants say that this article is copied in the pirate edition. The other suit is begun by Charles Scribner's Sons, who are the American agents for the encyclopaedia. They allege that in the twenty-third volume of the brother on Alien edition are reproduced several maps which were loudly for ingistrally made for "Scribner's Statistical Atlas of ing youth."
